Sadat Says He'll Free Prisoners Many Egyptians Held, Never Tried

CAIRO, May 31 (Reuters).—President Anwar Sadat promised today to free all private citizens detained without trial and ordered police to investigate the case of everyone under arrest in Egypt.

He gave the order after presiding at a ceremonial burning of taped telephone conversations and secret files collected by the now-disbanded state security apparatus.

The taped records, which Mr. Sadat said in a recent speech could have ruined many families and ended many careers, went up with a roar of flame in the courtyard of the Interior Ministry building in central Cairo.

President Sadat had promised the showpiece ending to a long era of wire-tapping and police surveillance after quashing an attempted coup by leading ministers and officers earlier in the month.

Jordan Orders Curfew

Jordanians and Guerrillas Clash; Each Accuses Other

BEIRUT, May 31 (AP)—The Jordanian government said today that Palestinian guerrillas have activated a plan of sabotage to undermine Jordan's army and provoke the army. An official spokesman was cited by Amman radio as saying the guerrillas had attacked phosphate mines, burned private roads, mined public roads and damaged a number of villages in the north after receiving them, according to the authorities. The guerrillas, on the other hand, accused the government of preparing an offensive to "exterminate" them in Jordan and for all. Each side reported new clashes and blamed the other for starting them.

According to a guerrilla spokesman here, the tension has spread to Amman. The spokesman said the Jordanian authorities imposed a curfew on three areas of the capital this morning.

The spokesman said Jordanian forces patrolled the main Wadiat refugee camp in Amman to stop Palestinians from demonstrating over the blowing-up of the "tomb of the unknown rebel" at the camp last night. The commandos accused government agents of sabotage.

India Seeking World's Help for Refugees

NEW DELHI, May 31 (AP)—India has launched a worldwide diplomatic offensive to convey the scale of the problem posed by the flood of 4 million East Pakistani refugees into territory within the last two weeks, informed sources said today.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has written to most world leaders stressing the need for prompt international action to solve the problem, the sources said.

India has been disappointed the slow reaction of the big powers to events in East Pakistan and the consequent exodus of refugees, now crossing into India at the rate of 100,000 a day.

Mrs. Gandhi said last week unless some solution to the problem is found soon, peace will be threatened throughout the Indian sub-continent and the rest of Southeast Asia.

Foreign Tour

Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh is due to leave New Delhi today for a week to visit Moscow, Paris and Washington in an attempt to impress on the major powers the gravity of the Indian situation.

Indian diplomatic missions throughout the world have been urged to try to impress on respective governments the dangers of present East Pakistan situation.

Diplomatic observers said that there was no doubt that India still remains with a problem of pressing proportions. Feeding 4 million East Pakistanis during the next six months is estimated to cost at least $240 million.

Meanwhile, in Islamabad the Pakistani government today announced that conscription of men 16 and over will be lifted immediately. Conscription was imposed on men 18 and over when military operations began in East Pakistan.

Pakistan Plans Camps
SARAGELI, May 31 (Reuters). The government will set up 20 camps on East Pakistan's border in India to handle refugees returning from that country, according to the official Associated Press of Pakistan.

In a report from Dacca, appearing on newspaper front pages here today, the agency said that a camp would be sited on the outskirts of Indian territory to receive refugees returning home.

Divided NATO Ponders Reply To Brezhnev on Troop Talks

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, May 31 (AP)—One item overshadows all others on the NATO foreign ministers' agenda this week in Lisbon: How to respond to Soviet party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's challenge to NATO's nuclear doctrine.

The Russians have spent an unusually active diplomatic spring. Beginning with Mr. Brezhnev's call for Big-Five nuclear talks at the 24th Soviet party congress in March, they have been spreading the message of détente in Europe at every chance. They have hinted that agreement is possible in the SALT talks, Berlin talks and on force reductions.

Three years ago, in Reykjavik, NATO first launched the idea of "mutual and balanced force reductions" (MBFR) as the allies now can hardly refuse Mr. Brezhnev's call for exploratory talks. Nevertheless, because of more recent developments, it is debatable whether all the allies were pleased over the timing of the latest Soviet challenge.

But the Russians appear serious. In his March 30 speech opening the 24th Soviet party congress, Mr. Brezhnev first hinted that he might be willing to consider balanced force reductions, and later declarations confirmed it.

The Russians dropped the precondition that their much-desired security conference be a HOSTAGE—Girl held by Turkish terrorists is shown at window of house. She was sent to the window by her captors to prove to police that she had not been harmed.

Suspects in Consul's Death Defy Crowd

Girl Held for 2d Day in Turkey

KARTAL, Turkey, May 31 (UPI).—Two gunmen wanted in the recent kidnapping of Israel's consul-general held out for the second day today in a barricaded apartment with a 14-year-old girl hostage. An army commander threatened to turn an angry crowd loose on them if they harmed the girl.

Soldiers and security agents surrounded the three-story, white-walled house and hoisted ladders from the roof to the third floor, where the two holed up yesterday morning after shooting a watchman and a woman.

The fugitives, tentatively identified as Mahir Cayan and Hussein Cevahir, held Sibel Erkan, daughter of an army major. Martial law authorities said the pair were demanding passports and free passage from the country in exchange for the girl.

Outside, crowds chanted "Idam idam" (execution, execution) and "Let us crush the vermin!"

take their quarry dead or alive after waiting them out.

Early today, the fugitives held a long-range conversation with an army major in the building's foyer. The major gave them until dawn to surrender, and they reportedly agreed.

But later they demanded safe passage to Cyprus, Russia or Palestinian guerrilla bases in Jordan as their price for freeing the girl and coming out.

The major, during the foyer interview, had talked at a distance through a 15-mile radius of the transfer site.

Brig. Gen. Celal Bulutlar yelled to the two over a megaphone that he would "let the other deal with you" if harm came to the girl.

The fugitives shouted back: "We shall not surrender! If you fire you will harm the girl. If you move you will face our guns."

"Younger Sister"

The suspects also yelled that their hostage was well, and that they were treating her like a "younger sister."

Late today, as they had yesterday, the wrapped men peered the girl in front of the window to show that she was still alive. Her would-be rescuers outside sent food intended for the girl to the third floor by rope.

Some 500 troops and police stood by. Heavy machine guns mounted on army jeeps were aimed at the windows. The crowd of bystanders had grown to about 1,000, police said.

Last night, the cornered gunmen fired shots at soldiers and police, but the security forces did not return the fire. An army official vowed there would be no shooting that might endanger the girl. He said the troops would

Stun-Gun Developed in U.S. For Use in Civil Disturbances

By Bryce Nelson

CHICAGO, Ill., May 31.—A highly socially responsible weapon called the stun-gun, developed in the wake of civil disturbances in the United States, is being promoted in the United States and abroad by its manufacturer where police desire to use force just short of gunfire.

The stun-gun is a short, baton-like weapon that is designed to fire shot-filled beanbags, wooden blocks, or plastic pellets. It costs $75.

"The 40-mm bore alone has got to scare people to death," said Robert Brokaw, a manufacturer's representative.

"They've just released them for South Africa; they really need them there," he said. "It's a way to be a Joe Louis for a few minutes and not kill a guy."

The company is now also selling its stun-guns to private security organizations. It plans to make a lower-powered stun-gun available to the private citizen within a few months.

One Illinois police officer expressed concern that the shot-filled bags might break on contact with a person's face, thus causing eye injuries. Mr. Brokaw said that if a bag hit a person's nose, it would break it. But he added that the pancake-like projectiles minimized damage by spreading the shock waves over the body. The gun can also be used to fire tear gas grenades more than 550 feet.

Mr. Brokaw, representing MBA Associates of San Ramon, Calif., who make the stun-gun, cautioned that firing it at short distances or firing the wooden blocks directly at people would result in death or serious injury.

If fired directly, "the multi-baton (wooden blocks) will kill people," Mr. Brokaw said. The blocks are meant to be fired at the ground, then to ricochet off the legs of people in a crowd.

Robert Manhardt, the president of MBA Associates, said his company was selling stun-guns to governments all over the world—Romania, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, England, West Germany.

Only 13 Red PWs Of 570 Agree to Return to Hanoi

By Alvin Shuster

SAIGON, May 31 (NYT).—Only 13 of the 570 disabled prisoners that South Vietnam offered to return to North Vietnam have agreed to go, officials said tonight.

The refusal of the rest of the prisoners has placed the United States and the South Vietnamese governments in an embarrassing position, possibly opening the way for charges by Hanoi of "bad faith" by the two governments on the prisoner issue.

The United States had hoped that the release of the prisoners would increase world pressure on Hanoi to reciprocate by releasing some of the American prisoners held in North Vietnam. Thus, American officials exerted firm pressure on Saigon to persuade it to meet all of Hanoi's terms for the release, scheduled for this Friday.

But to the dismay of American and South Vietnamese officials, and the International Red Cross officials who screened the sick and disabled North Vietnamese prisoners, only 13 were found willing to return. South Vietnam even turned an additional 90 disabled prisoners over to the Red Cross officials for questioning.

Hanoi Tapes Played

Tape recording of the Radio Hanoi broadcast agreeing to accept the "Vietnamese patriots" were played to the prisoners, who were asked by Red Cross officials if they wished to return home.

South Vietnamese officials, angry that so few prisoners agreed to go north, said they plan to return the 13 as scheduled. Hanoi had stipulated a ship-to-ship transfer off the coast of the Demilitarized Zone dividing North and South Vietnam. A 24-hour truce will be put into effect around an 18-mile radius of the transfer site.

Officials said that some prisoners may yet change their mind before Friday and decide to return, but the total is not expected to change substantially.

The release of 570 prisoners would have been the largest of the war. The last prisoner release was in January when 37 North Vietnamese prisoners were repatriated. So far more than 200 sick and wounded prisoners have been returned to North Vietnam.

Explanation Lacking

Why so many prisoners refused to return to the north could not be explained with certainty by officials tonight. Some South Vietnamese said that the prisoners preferred to stay in the south out of fear of returning.

A mortar round landed 30 yards from the cathedral, wounding a ten-year-old girl. Hundreds took refuge in the cathedral.

The religious gathering has taken place at Fra Kieu every three years since 1885 when the Virgin Mary is said to have appeared before villagers. It was canceled last year because of heavy fighting in the area.

Bombing in Saigon

In Saigon, a plastic bomb ripped through the compartment of the central tax records office, causing one building to collapse and setting a second one afire.

Police at the scene said four persons, all of them children, were killed. A fifth bystander was critically injured and ten other persons, some of them inside the buildings when the explosion occurred, were injured.

All the dead and injured were Vietnamese, U.S. officials said.

The powerful plastic charge was apparently planted at the base of one of the four-story masonry buildings dating from the French colonial era.

Near the northern end of the A. Chau Valley, in South Vietnam's northern sector, Communist forces made a heavy ground attack against a hilltop South Vietnamese artillery base, military spokesmen reported.

Field reports said at least 61 Communist-led troops were killed in an hour of fighting at the base. Fifteen South Vietnamese were reported killed and 28 wounded.

U.S. Command spokesmen announced that 3,600 more Americans were withdrawn from the war zone last week, leaving 255,700 U.S. servicemen in South Vietnam. This was the lowest figure since March 31, 1966, when there were 231,200.

Red Defeat in Laos

VIENTIANE, May 31 (UPI).—A Defense Ministry spokesman said government forces aided by tactical bombing support today recaptured a strategic position in the Bolovens Plateau.

Gen. Thongphan Knocksy said Ban Phak-Kout on Highway 23, seven miles west of Pakson, was taken this morning. He said 64 North Vietnamese bodies were left on the battlefield and one Communist soldier was captured. The position was attacked and occupied by the North Vietnamese Friday.

GIs in Britain Protest War To Embassy

By Bernard Weinraub

LONDON, May 31 (NYT).—Nearly 1,000 American servicemen stationed in Britain announced their opposition to the Vietnam war today.

In a series of petitions presented to the U.S. Embassy, servicemen from a half-dozen bases in Britain said: "We, the undersigned members of the U.S. Army and Navy, stationed in England, are opposed to the American war in Indochina."

"Because Vietnamization is increasing the Air Force and Navy role in the war, it is more important than ever before that we voice our opposition," the petitions said.

They were carried to the embassy by a group identified as 300 off-duty American servicemen who were predominantly from the Air Force.

Today's protest was part of a spreading anti-war movement among Air Force enlisted men here, spurred by American students, (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7).

Exiled Mafiosi Protesting, Too: No Place to Spend Their Money

ISLE OF FILICUDI, Italy, May 31 (AP).—Fifteen reputed Mafia chiefs, the unwanted guests of this sleepy fishing islet, joined the islanders today in protesting their own presence.

"We can't even spend our money," complained Nino Buccellato, one of the 16 men exiled by the Italian government to the island. "There is nothing to buy," he said, referring to shops boarded up as islanders abandoned their village to protest the arrival of the reputed mafiosi.

"We are without a doctor, without medicine, we only eat what the Carabinieri (national police) cook us," he said. "We can't even make a phone call."

Even the doctor and telephone operator packed today to follow the rest of the residents who quit the island in protest over the exile here of reputed Mafia gangsters.

Buccellato told newsmen that the Human Rights Commission should look into their case unless the government rescinds its order and transfers him and his colleagues from this island of 200 persons, 50 miles off Sicily.

The veteran of the unwanted in Filicudi, John Bonaventura, 71, says that he is uncared for although he suffered minor injuries in a fall shortly after arriving at the island. In nearby Lipari, the administrative center of the same chain of islands, the municipal council has resigned. Labor leaders and businessmen plan to follow up their general strike with another one tomorrow.

tance with the 14-year-old girl. She said she was all right, he reported.

She asked about the rest of her family, who had been freed by the gunmen when they burst into the Erkan apartment yesterday.

They had taken refuge there, authorities said, after police raided a nearby apartment early yesterday, flushing four "top suspects" in the early-May abduction and murder of Israeli Consul Ephraim Elron, 59.

The four dashed into a street of this seaside town. Two of them shot a woman who recognized them from wanted bulletins and a watchman who ran out as she yelled. Those two gunmen dashed into the Erkan apartment.

Their two companions fled. But police said the quartet had dropped a bag containing 30,000 lira and documents belonging to the slain Israeli. Police dogs having sniffed the bag, are now trailing the two suspects who got away from the quarter, police said.

3 'Rebels' Slain

ANKARA, May 31 (AP).—Three youths suspected to be members of the extreme-left student union, Revolutionary Youth, were shot and killed today by gendarmes in the southeastern town of Adiyaman, near the Syrian border, officials disclosed.

The gendarmes had asked six suspicious-looking youths to identify themselves, but they answered by opening fire, police said.

In the ensuing clash the three youths were killed, one was wounded and one was captured unhurt. The sixth escaped.

Police Chief Fired

ISTANBUL, May 31 (AP).—Istanbul's police chief, Muzaffer Cangir, was dismissed from his post today for what authorities called "grave shortcomings in his official activities." The sacking came three days after news that two former top police officials here—Rafet Karpagni and Muzaffer Yilmaz—were arrested as allegedly being involved in activities of the Turkish People's Liberation Army.

Prague Raises Economic Goals

PRAGUE, May 31 (AP).—The Czechoslovak Communist party tonight issued economic directives calling for a 28 percent increase in the national income by 1975.

Approved by last week's party congress, the directives will be incorporated into the government's five-year plan due later this year. The party said increased productivity of labor should account for 85 percent of the rise in national income.

Experts Cite Rich Mineral Lode in Seas

Say Evidence Shows Enough for Century

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., May 31 (AP).—Scientists from 18 countries say there is growing evidence that the world's oceans contain enough minerals to meet the world's needs for at least a century.

In a report to the UN Economic and Social Council, the council's advisory committee on the application of science and technology to development cites estimates that:

- The earth's 300 million cubic miles of sea water contains an astronomical amount of dissolved solids.
- More than $7 billion worth of minerals were produced from the sea in 1969.
- Oil and gas deposits under the seabed may exceed those available on land.

"Recent discoveries point to the possibility of exploring and exploiting new resources of minerals in the future," the committee says.

It notes that a U.S. project has shown that a hole drilled in the ocean floor more than three miles under water can be used again and again in exploring for oil.

It mentions the discovery more than a mile down in the Red Sea of three pools of hot brine estimated to contain over $2.3 billion in gold, copper, zinc and silver dissolved in the top layer alone.

Investment Needed

The heavy investment needed for deep-sea mining has retarded its development, the report says, but "a pattern of technological feasibility and profitability is emerging, especially for the petroleum industry."

Undersea wells now produce 17 percent of the world's crude oil, the experts report, and by 1980 they are expected to be producing more than 32 percent.

Minerals are harder to find the farther they are from shore, the committee says, so "improved techniques are required for offshore exploration."

"Basic maps and accurate maritime data are required for the exploitation of mineral resources of the sea," it says. "No significant areas of the oceans have as yet been surveyed thoroughly enough to produce a detailed picture of the bottom."

The committee says another thing that has to be settled is who owns the resources on or under the seabed. It notes that the UN committee on the peaceful uses of the seabed and ocean floor has been working on that problem.

Ceausescu Leads Romanian Group Visiting Peking

VIENNA, May 31 (AP).—Romanian party chief Nicolae Ceausescu, heading a group of party and government officials, left for China today on the first official visit by an East European party chief since the ideological split between Peking and Moscow.

The visit, first described by the Romanian news agency Agencepres as "a friendship visit," was seen here as a new demonstration of Romania's independence of the Kremlin. Mr. Ceausescu has constantly advocated a policy of friendship with all Communist parties and has called on them to settle ideological differences by a meeting of party chiefs.

Agencepres made no comment on the visit, but told of the reaction in China. It said that the Peking correspondent of the Romanian party paper Scinteia reported that the Chinese "looked forward with affection to meeting the distinguished Romanian guests" and that this opinion was shared by the man on the street.

Wang Hsia-ti, an executive of the Chinese Foreign Ministry, was quoted as stating, "I am convinced this visit will strengthen the friendship of the two parties, governments and peoples as well as the understanding between the two countries."

Soviet Mothers Ask Emigration For Children

MOSCOW, May 31 (AP).—A group of Soviet Jewish mothers have written a petition appealing that their children be allowed to emigrate to Israel.

The petition, signed by 13 women and made available today to Western correspondents here, is addressed to Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and other leaders.

According to Jewish sources, the mothers intend to hand over the appeal to officials of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) tomorrow.

"Our children do not have the possibility to learn the language and history of their people, to learn and love their culture," the women wrote.

"Our children are deprived of a motherland in the most exact meaning of the term and we fear for their future. The future of people without a motherland is the degrading and sorry future of outcasts."

The mothers declared they are willing to let their children—aged eight months to 19 years—go to Israel even if they themselves were not allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

prelude to any talks on forces. They also indicated that the talks could involve not only "foreign" (American) troops but also Central European troops.

These appear to be significant advances and the question is: Why did the Soviet Union make this move?

There are various theories on this and they can be roughly divided into the U.S. theory, the French theory, the German theory (Norway, Denmark) and the NATO right-wing theory (Portugal, Greece).

These sharply divided feelings inside NATO, incidentally, may suggest one reason for the Tbilisi speech. The differences are expected to be patched up enough in Lisbon, however, for a NATO emissary to be designated to make initial contacts with the Warsaw Pact countries.

The U.S. theory on the Russian move is that the Russians have sensed feelings inside Congress to transfer part of the U.S. defense role in Europe to the Europeans. The Russians see a way through these talks to reduce American presence and influence in Europe. Nevertheless, the United States favors tasting the wine and is preparing its own highly detailed plans for mutual troop reductions to assure that they would be balanced.

The West German theory is that it is a Russian way of getting to transfer part of the U.S. defense role in Europe to the Europeans. The Germans see the "progress" made during last week's Big-Four Berlin talks—when the Soviet Union admitted a degree of responsibility on maintaining the access routes to Berlin—as stage setting for the NATO meeting but without real substance. The Germans, who have tied the success of the Ostpolitik to a Berlin settlement, want any force reduction talks also tied to a Berlin settlement.

The left-wing NATO theory is roughly that all mutual reductions would be a good thing and NATO should seriously consider the Soviet proposal. The right-

Lisbon Palace Spruced Up for NATO Session

LISBON, May 31 (AP).—Portugal has spent 20 million escudos ($700,000) on a facelift for the sprawling and rarely used 19th-century Ajuda Palace, site for the NATO ministerial meeting Thursday and Friday.

Situated on one of Lisbon's seven hills overlooking the broad Tagus estuary, the Ajuda Palace, former home of the kings and queens of Portugal, has stood empty since the turn of the century when the royal family decided to take up residence elsewhere.

More than 500 laborers and skilled craftsmen have been working around the clock for the last six months to redecorate and modernize the cold, drafty palace for the NATO meeting.

A 38-year-old Brazilian architect, Jose Almeida de Oliveira, has directed their work. Under his guidance, decorators have attempted to retain much of the old charm of the white marble palace and at the same time reconcile its past with the needs of today.

2 Die in Bombay In Monsoon

BOMBAY, May 31 (Reuters).—The monsoon, which annually unleashes torrential rains across the Indian subcontinent, today burst over this city.

Argentine Guerrillas Attack Police Posts

ROSARIO, Argentina, May 31 (AP).—Terrorists attacked three police posts on Highway 9 near here today. The terrorists—apparently left-wing urban guerrillas, police said—took arms from each post and destroyed communications equipment. No one was injured.

The attacks came less than 24 hours after a ransom of $62,000 in food and clothing won the release of Stanley Sylvester, the British honorary consul here. Guerrillas had kidnapped him a week earlier. The police said they did not know if the "People's Revolutionary Army," which had abducted Mr. Sylvester, was responsible for today's attacks on the police posts.

Neo-Fascists Attack Sicilian Rally Crowd

PALERMO, Sicily, May 31 (AP).—Masked neo-fascists attacked a group of students with clubs, chains and stones today in another outbreak of pre-election violence in Italy.

About 30 extremists ganged up on students who had just attended an anti-Fascist demonstration. One of the victims required treatment at a first-aid center. After the attack, the young rightists charged into Palermo University's Chemical and Genetics Institute, smashing windows and overturning furniture, police said.

Rogers Affirms Peace Goals As Students Vow 'No Combat'

HAMILTON, N.Y., May 31 (AP).—Secretary of State William P. Rogers, speaking at a Colgate University commencement ceremony during which 159 graduating seniors pledged not to go into Indochina combat if drafted, said yesterday that it is clear beyond a challenge that President Nixon is getting the United States out of the war in Vietnam.

Mr. Rogers said the administration was searching for peace, with initiatives in the Middle East, in dealings with Communist China, arms control, combating pollution on the international level and reducing America's military presence overseas.

"I'm sure that members of the graduating class would agree with this policy," toward peace, Mr. Rogers said.

Thomas W. O'Brien, of New York City, delivered a "counter-statement" in his valedictory address that decried the nation's involvement in Vietnam.

Senators' Statement

Mr. O'Brien read the names of graduating senior men who had signed a statement saying: "The following seniors... wish to go on record as expressing their extreme dissatisfaction with American foreign policy in Southeast Asia. We pledge that if drafted, we will not accept a combat role in Indochina."

The men, among 470 graduating, stood individually as their names were read, along with a few hundred assenting parents and faculty members in the audience.

Colgate President Thomas A. Bartlett then went to the podium and said: "I'm deeply troubled. I'm profoundly disappointed at this misuse of me, misuse of the occasion and the secretary of state."

After receiving a round of applause, Mr. Bartlett turned to Mr. Rogers and said, "My apologies about the incident."

He ignores incident

Mr. O'Brien, noting that the protest had been carried off with decorum, said that in mapping strategy "our whole approach was to keep the far left of the school from going bananas (being foolish)."

Of chairman, Mr. Rogers had said, "There will continue to be debate and public discussion on the pace and the details of the withdrawals, but our course, which has been carefully charted by President Nixon, is irrevocable. "The direction and the certainty of our policy can no longer be seriously questioned," he said.

Peace Talks Are Proposed By Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, May 31 (Reuters).—Cambodian head of state Cheng Heng said today that his government was willing to open discussions to end the war in Cambodia if the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese withdrew all their troops.

Government sources said that it was the first public declaration by the Cambodian government that it was interested in peace talks since the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk in March last year.

The sources said that Mr. Cheng Heng's statement at the opening of the final session of the National Assembly was not a new proposal but ended more than a year's public silence by the Cambodian government on the subject of peace talks.

Speaking in the Khmer language to the National Assembly, Mr. Cheng Heng said that Cambodia would accept any negotiations at any time if they respected Cambodia's independence, neutrality, territorial integrity and sovereignty and were preceded by a pullout of all Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops.

American Embassy sources said that the reiteration of the policy on peace talks after such a long silence was significant but meant that Cambodia was thinking of joining the Paris peace talks or opening separate negotiations.

Reds Reject Appeal

PARIS, May 31 (Reuters).—North Vietnamese and Viet Cong officials today rejected as nonsense the Cambodian peace overture.

Duong Dinh Thao, spokesman for the Viet Cong delegation to the Paris peace talks, said, "We support the struggle waged by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and the Khmer people and will never have anything to do with the present Phnom Penh administration."

Charge by GOP Congressman Nixon Denies '68 Vow to End War in 6 Months If Elected

Rep. Donald W. Riegle

WASHINGTON, May 31 (NYT). -Rep. Donald W. Riegle, R-Mich., repeated yesterday his charge that President Nixon told him nearly three years ago that if he were elected to the presidency, the war in Vietnam would be ended within six months.

Rep. Riegle, who has been associated with Republicans who are trying to thwart a possible bid for re-election by Mr. Nixon next year, said that he and a staff assistant were invited to meet with Mr. Nixon in his New York apartment on June 22, 1968, just before the Republican National Convention in Miami, Fla. "I went down and spent about an hour and a half with Mr. Nixon discussing the Vietnam war issue," the congressman said. "And at the end of that time he said to me, 'Don, you know, if we are elected we will end this war in six months.'"

Pollution Curb Is Linked to Higher Taxes

By James L. Rowe Jr. WASHINGTON, May 31 (WP). -A member of the Federal Reserve Board warned yesterday that Americans should expect to see higher taxes for pollution abatement and other social services now being demanded.

Andrew F. Brimmer said the nation's already inadequate public services are in danger of "a serious deterioration"—especially at the state and local level—for want of tax money. Mr. Brimmer was speaking at commencement exercises at Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vt., where he received an honorary doctor of laws degree. Primarily because of the 1969 Tax Reform Act, which slashed personal taxes, private consumption has been given a much higher priority over public spending than is consistent with our long-run requirements in the area of public service," he said.

537 Billion Cut Coupled with the administration's proposed liberalization of depreciation regulations—which the Treasury estimates will cut business taxes $37 billion over the decade—the Tax Reform Act will reduce the public sector's share of the gross national product.

Anti-War Vets At Bunker Hill During Protest

BOSTON, May 31 (AP).—About 300 anti-war veterans camped out on historic Bunker Hill today as they neared the end of a 20-mile hike from Concord "to spread the alarm" against the war in Vietnam. The demonstrators, tracing in reverse the midnight ride Paul Revere made in 1775 to spread the warning that British troops were coming, said they would march the final two miles to Boston Common today. The demonstrators, members of a group called Vietnam Veterans Against the War, were dressed in Army fatigues and carried toy weapons on the march, which a spokesman said was held "to spread the alarm that we are all prisoners of this war." Police had told the veterans they could not remain on Bunker Hill after a 10:30 p.m. curfew but relented provided the demonstrators remained orderly.

Western Union Strike Is Scheduled Today

NEW YORK, May 31 (UPI).—Negotiations between Western Union and the Communications Workers of America broke down today, ensuring a nationwide strike against the telegraph company at midnight tonight. The CWA represents some 3,100 WU employees in the New York metropolitan area. The United Telegraph Workers, representing 17,000 employees of the company elsewhere in the country, had already authorized a strike.

Death Squad Kills 2

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 31 (AP).—Brazil's notorious death squad has killed two more persons, bringing to 13 the number blamed on the vigilantes this month, officials said yesterday. The squad, believed made up of 41-duty policemen, has been held responsible for the deaths of at least 1,500 persons since 1958.

Mass Murder Suspect Corona: a Familiar Figure, But a Mystery

YUBA CITY, Calif., May 31 (AP).—Juan Valledo Corona, 37, was a familiar figure in the cantinas and ski-dive bars of Marysville and Yuba City, a muscular, businesslike man scouting for farm workers. He also was a familiar figure in his neighborhood, where he owned a $23,000 home, and at the church where he took his family every Sunday.

Today, Mr. Corona sits in a jail cell, charged with at least ten murders in connection with the discovery of 23 bodies buried in the fruit orchards near here. Meanwhile, Sheriff Roy Whiteaker said he was holding a material witness, Roy Delong, 52, in the county jail at Yuba City. Mr. Delong was arrested in Marysville Saturday night. He had been picked up early Friday but released shortly thereafter. At that time he told police he had seen one of the victims, Sigried Beierman, 63, get into a car driven by Mr. Corona. Mr. Whiteaker also said he had asked the Air Force for an SR-71 "spy" plane to fly over the orchard and take infra-red pictures, in the hope of detecting more gravesites.

The sheriff said he was "very close, I hope" to the end of the search. Mr. Corona's wife, Gloria, says of her husband: "He couldn't have done anything like this." She said he "always treated me right and was never violent with me or our four children... I love him and always will want him back home." "Very Mean-Tempered" The operator of a second-hand store on the grubby street where Mr. Corona, a farm labor recruiter, hired workers for the orchards, said: "It's well known that he was a very mean-tempered, a vicious man and a fighter."

1,000 Given LSD-Spiked Cider At San Francisco Rock Concert

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31 (UPI).—About 1,000 young people attending a rock concert featuring the Grateful Dead took an unexpected trip last night when their apple cider turned out to be spiked with LSD.

Police officers reported that during a five-hour period near Mount Zion Hospital treated more than 30 concert-goers who complained of going through a "bad trip." No one was hospitalized. Police, who estimated that 1,000 of the 4,500 attending the concert were affected by the spiked drinks, said they arrested six men and one woman for investigation.

Typical U.S. Family Increases In Education, Income and Age

By Jack Rosenthal WASHINGTON, May 31 (NYT).—The typical American family is a little older, a little smaller and has considerably more income and education than it did 20 years ago, the Census Bureau reports. The bureau, which earlier this month located the demographic midpoint of the nation at Mascoutah, Ill., near St. Louis, now has calculated a series of social midpoints. For example, the typical family is now more likely to have two children than three, and the children are more likely to be older—about 17 and 19, the census compilation says. The father is almost 45 and the mother almost 42. Both figures are about a year older than in 1950.

Salinger Joins McGovern Team

NEW YORK, May 31 (UPI).—Pierre Salinger, who was in the thick of the John and Robert Kennedy's primary battles, will join the presidential campaign of Sen. George McGovern, D., S.D., this week, convinced that Sen. McGovern is a far stronger candidate than the polls indicate. "He's best in a confrontation situation," Mr. Salinger said. "I remember him in the debate before the California caucus at the 1968 convention when he absolutely demolished Hubert and Gene. And don't forget that he has won Senate elections twice in South Dakota, which is rural Republican heartland." He referred to Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democratic presidential candidate in 1968, and Eugene McCarthy, a contender for the nomination.

War Hero and Movie Actor Audie Murphy Killed in Plane Crash

Audie Murphy in 1970

ROANOKE, Va., May 31 (AP).—Wreckage of a light plane carrying Audie Murphy, actor and America's most decorated World War II hero, was found near the top of a wooded mountain here today. The police said six bodies were recovered from the burned-out craft.

State Police Lt. Marvin Kent said the bodies were "badly mangled," and no attempt to identify them would be made at the scene. Originally it was believed there were only five in the plane. Rescue workers reached the crash site at 5 p.m. after an afternoon of hiking through rugged mountain terrain to a point near the peak of a mountain. The pilot of the Virginia State Police helicopter that hovered over the wreckage for an hour after its discovery said the plane burned on impact. Numbers still visible on an unburned portion of the tail assembly matched those of the chartered twin-engine Aerocommander boarded by Mr. Murphy and other businessmen in Atlanta Friday morning.

The helicopter pilot said it appeared from the wreckage and the fact that impact occurred only 300 feet from the top of Brush Mountain that the plane was trying for a landing approach to Roanoke's Woodrum Field, 20 miles to the east. The site of the wreckage is 20 miles east of the West Virginia border in rugged highlands. The plane was en route to Martinsville, Va. The last reported contact was when the pilot, Herman Butler, radioed the flight service station at Woodrum Field shortly after 11 a.m. Friday, saying he would land there at 11:49 a.m. Known to be with Mr. Murphy, 46, were Claude Crosby, president of Modular Management, a subsidiary of Modular Properties, Inc., of Atlanta; Jack Littleton, representing a group of investors from California; Raymond Frater, a lawyer representing Modular Management; and Mr. Butler. A spokesman for Modular Properties, Inc., which specializes in factory-built homes, motels and other structures, said the four were going to Martinsville to inspect a company plant. Mr. Murphy was considering investing in the firm, he said.

of attacking Germans, some of whom crept to within ten yards of his position. In this engagement he was credited with killing or wounding some 50 enemy soldiers.

More Than 49 Films LOS ANGELES, May 31 (AP).—Audie Murphy made more than 40 films after being discharged from the U.S. Army in 1945. "And Back," "The Red Badge of Courage" and "The Quiet American," most of his films were Westerns. "I made the same Western about 30 times," he once told a reporter. "With different horses."

He had been relatively inactive as an actor since the late 1950s. His first publicity in years came in May, 1970, when he was accused of assaulting and firing a gun at a dog trainer during an argument. He was acquitted of all charges by a jury last October. In 1968, Mr. Murphy declared bankruptcy. He said that a series of losing business deals had left him broke. In recent years he had been able to recoup his losses.

Through in his 40s, Mr. Murphy retained the baby face, soda fountain pompadour and nasal Texas twang he had when he left home from Kingston, Texas, to join the Army at 18. He was brought to Hollywood by James Cagney, who saw Mr. Murphy's picture on the cover of Life magazine. Before that, Mr. Murphy, son of a sharecropper, had planned to become a veterinarian. He was happy to become an actor—"It beats picking cotton," he once told a newsmen. But he added that World War II left him quiet and occasionally apathetic. "It's funny, I never remember being worn out in the war. Tired, yes, but I'd bounce right back. Then one night in Lyons people were cheering and shouting that the war in Europe was over. "I could feel the blood drain out. My blood pressure went way down and stayed there, and I've been that way ever since."

Mr. Murphy lived in North Hollywood with his second wife, the former Pamela Archer, and their two sons, Terry, 18, and James, 16. His previous marriage, to actress Wanda Hendrix, ended in divorce. His unit had suffered heavy casualties and Lt. Murphy was the acting company commander. Attacked by six enemy tanks and waves of infantry, he ordered his men to withdraw and then set up a one-man counter-attack. With a field telescope, he gave orders to an artillery unit, which plastered the area with shells. Using a 50-caliber machine gun in the turret of a knocked-out U.S. tank, he held off wave after wave

But UN Issue May Delay It

Key Test Seen Near for China's ICBM

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON, May 31 (NYT)—China, whose long-range missile program has lagged behind American predictions, appears on the verge of two important breakthroughs, in the view of some analysts here.

China is rapidly getting into position to test-fire its first liquid-fuel intercontinental ballistic missile beyond its borders, probably into the Indian Ocean, they say.

In addition, China has built a solid-fuel production plant and is developing a solid-fuel ICBM, the analysts say.

The preparations for the launch beyond China's borders include the outfitting of a special tracking ship and the extension of missile range tracking stations in Sinkiang Province. But political considerations, the analysts say, may cause the Chinese to defer such testing for several months.

Liquid or Solid

A senior weapons expert says that it is far from clear whether China will follow the pattern of the United States and the Soviet Union and first deploy liquid-fuel ICBMs before moving to solid-fuel weapons, or will start with the more stable solid-fuel system.

It is estimated that it will probably take at least three years, after initial tests, for China to move to the first group of operational ICBMs. The technology of solid fuel as well as liquid fuels should be mastered by that time, the weapons specialists suggested.

Most analysts agree that China is capable of launching an ICBM any time it chooses. Some intelligence experts believe China has already done so, although on a short course.

Three-Stage Missile

Late last year, they say, China fired a three-stage missile from a new launch site in northeast Manchuria into western Sinkiang Province, over a 2,200-mile course. Some analysts, on the basis of the size of the stages as seen in reconnaissance photos and other evidence, calculated that the missile could have been fired at least 3,500 miles, which would have carried it out over India into the Indian Ocean.

In arms control talks, the United States and Russia have defined an ICBM as any ballistic missile that can travel over 3,000 miles.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird told Congress in March about the possibility of China's capacity to launch such a missile when he said: "The start of testing has not yet been confirmed, but a reduced range test of an ICBM may have occurred in late 1970."

Satellite Launcher

Analysts say the 2,200-mile shot was believed to have been made with a liquid-fuel missile similar to the rockets that China used to orbit a 861-pound satellite in April, 1970, and a 486-pound satellite in March.

The first out-of-country tests are expected to range between 3,500 and 4,500 miles. The Indian Ocean is considered the most likely landing point, but some analysts say that a test firing into the Pacific Ocean is not ruled out.

For several months China has been equipping the 12,000-ton freighter Hsiao Yang Hung in a shipyard near Canton with space tracking and telemetry devices, sources say. One analyst says the work has been completed and that the vessel sailed into the Indian Ocean recently on a cruise to familiarize the crew with the ship and her special gear.

But many analysts say that Peking is so anxious to get admitted to the United Nations that it is likely to defer the first ICBM test until after that issue has been resolved.

Sightseers Upset Farmers on Etna

FORNAZZO, Sicily, May 31 (AP)—Distressed farmers on Mount Etna complained bitterly today that thousands of sightseers watching the eruption were doing more damage to their fields than the lava.

Crowds trampled the vineyards and climbed to perches in the fruit trees even at night to see the fiery spectacle.

"The sightseers are like a plague of locusts," one woman said. "They are ruining everything and what they don't trample and destroy they carry off as souvenirs."

After Encounter of Sub, Trawler

Britain Asks Spain to Return Sonar Buoys

LONDON, May 31 (UPI)—Britain appealed to Spain today to return electronic buoys picked up by a Spanish trawler in a bizarre confrontation with a British submarine. Each vessel thought the other was Russian.

The Foreign Office acknowledged that the British submarine Otus opened fire with a machine gun when the Spanish trawler Maria Victoria Moyana fished the three buoys from the Atlantic on the night of May 20.

The trawler's skipper, Antonio Diaz Mila, said his vessel was heading for its home port in La Coruna, in northwestern Spain, when a Royal Air Force reconnaissance plane buzzed the vessel off southwest Ireland.

Mr. Diaz said the plane ordered the trawler to change course and proceed to a spot nearby to recover "three floating objects."

As his crew bailed the orange buoys aboard, Mr. Diaz said, a "black submarine" surfaced nearby and "three blond men" hailed him in "Russian" from its bridge. Then, he said, the submarine opened fire with a machine gun from the conning tower.

"We took the machine-gun fire to be a salute," Mr. Diaz told newsmen in La Coruna. "It was not fired at us. At first we thought the submarine was Russian. We thought the firing was a gesture of thanks for recovering the objects."

Mr. Diaz said the submarine then vanished into the dark, and the trawler proceeded to La Coruna, where Spanish authorities took the buoys into custody.

In London the Foreign Office issued a statement saying, "We think it is all a misunderstanding. We hope the buoys will be returned by Spain without official action or protest. We hope very much it will be settled amicably and soon."

The British Defense Ministry said the incident occurred when the submarine and a Royal Air Force anti-submarine aircraft were conducting exercises using sonar buoys supplied by NATO.

When the trawler picked up the buoys, the Defense Ministry said, the plane radioed the submarine to surface and recover the devices.

The ministry said the submarine used a bull horn in an unsuccessful attempt to persuade the trawler to return the buoys to the water, then opened fire "in an attempt to attract the trawler's attention."

Defense Ministry officials said the submarine and plane apparently thought the Spanish vessel was a Soviet trawler of the kind equipped with electronic devices that monitor NATO maneuvers.

"At no time was there any question of the use of force or a threat to board the trawler," a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

The ministry said the five-foot-long buoys transmit "beeps" when they are dropped into the sea by planes, enabling them to track submarines. The ministry said they were "not highly classified."

Sartre Defends Paris Newsman Held by Police

PARIS, May 31 (AP)—Leftist intellectuals including Jean-Paul Sartre came to the defense today of a Paris journalist who was injured Saturday after a street demonstration.

The journalist, Alain Jaubert, said he got into a police van to accompany a man who had been injured during the demonstration, in favor of "the people of Martinique."

Mr. Jaubert claimed he was beaten up by police in the van for more than an hour while the van drove through the Montmartre district, and then was thrown out of the van along with the demonstrator.

However, police contended that Mr. Jaubert hurt himself jumping into the moving police van, and then shouted insults at the police and eventually injured three of them. He was charged with assaulting police officers. Both he and the demonstrator were arrested and hospitalized.

A manifesto signed by Mr. Sartre and other intellectuals supported Mr. Jaubert's version of the incident and said that neither his lawyer nor wife had been able to contact him. Mr. Jaubert works for a scientific newspaper and the Nouvel Observateur, a liberal weekly.

300 on Cruise Ship Get Food Poisoning

LISBON, May 31 (AP)—The captain of the P. and O. liner Orades said Saturday when the 28,400-ton vessel berthed here that 300 of the 1,400 passengers had come down with food poisoning off the coast of Africa a week ago, but had recovered.

Capt. R.E. Nowell said that the 300 passengers had become ill apparently after eating a seafood cocktail when the ship was off Dakar, Senegal. All but a very few had recovered within 38 hours. The Orades was on a regular run from Sydney, Australia, to Southampton, England.

Organist Marcel Dupre, 85; Career Spanned 73 Years

MEUDON, France, May 31 (UPI)—Organist and composer Marcel Dupre, 85, died at his home yesterday after a 73-year career that began when he was 12 and ended only three weeks ago with a concert at Albert Hall in London.

Mr. Dupre was for more than a half century considered one of the world's leading improvisers and organists, with a profound influence on contemporary French playing.

He was a child prodigy, being named chief organist at St. Vivien Church in his native Rouen at the age of 12.

After study at the Paris Conservatory under Diemer and Gilmant, he won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1914. Then followed a long career in which he played all over Europe and in the United States.

In 1934 he succeeded Charles Widor as organist of St. Sulpice Church in Paris.

In Philadelphia in 1921 at the inauguration of a new organ, Mr. Dupre improvised a symphony in four movements on seven themes.

His posts included organ professorship and later directorship of the Paris Conservatory. He also headed the American Conservatory of Music in Pontrebeau and was a member of the Academie des Beaux-Arts. His major compositions included two oratorios for organ, choir and orchestra—"De Profundis," in memory of fallen soldiers, and "France at Calvary," written for the rebuilding of Rouen Cathedral. He also wrote nearly 100 other works.

Vorster Sees Red China as Top Threat

CAPE TOWN, May 31 (UPI)—South African Premier John Vorster today warned the Communist Chinese present in Tanzania was the greatest threat to Africa.

Speaking at celebrations marking the country's tenth anniversary as a republic, Mr. Vorster said the African continent also threatened by disease, civil, Russian infiltration violence, but that the greatest threat was the Communist Chinese presence in Tanzania, the great threat to Africa.

... I will do everything in my power to promote this. If we can come to an understanding with Africa, the rest of the world will also understand better," the premier added.

Next 4 Years

Mr. Vorster said the next years would be decisive for Africa.

"It can, of course, be expected that there will be setbacks and setbacks that the people of Africa will always get but their feet and continue to go on."

"I believe all will be well. We go forth with the knowledge that we have a calling and if we place our trust in God."

Mr. Vorster said: "More in the world today are in a state of flux than ever before."

... I will do everything in my power to promote this. If we can come to an understanding with Africa, the rest of the world will also understand better," the premier added.

S. Africa to Le. Playwright Pa Visit to Britain

CAPE TOWN, May 31 (UPI)—Athol Fugard, the South African playwright outspoken opponent of apartheid, has been granted permission to visit Britain, four years of passport was confiscated.

Mr. Fugard had his passport taken away by the South African authorities in 1967. No was given, but he had written a play called "The Blood" which was described as a parody and referred to apartheid.

Mr. Fugard has been invited to Britain for the production of his play "Boesman and Lena," at London's Royal Theatre Opera.

"I am thrilled and excited and enthusiastic," Fugard said yesterday.

Last month a petition signed more than 4,000 people, of them prominent in African arts, was presented to the interior minister Theo Ge. calling for Mr. Fugard's passport to be returned.

The playwright then applied its return for the third time it had been confiscated.

TWA: the first airline with a terminal in New York that has its own customs facilities.

TWA's new terminal in New York is a miracle of common sense and convenience. Telescopic walks will take you from the plane to the terminal. Your bags will be delivered through completely new system—conveyorized and automated. You will be able to slip through one of twenty customs stations we've provided. Then a moving sidewalk will take you to cabs and buses, while a conveyor belt will take your luggage. And the whole thing shouldn't take more than twenty minutes. Ask any travel agent.

One of the things that keeps TWA one step ahead.

Papal Police Halt War Protest By a U.S. Priest at St. Peter's

VATICAN CITY, May 31 (AP)—An American priest has been hauled out of St. Peter's Basilica by papal plainclothesmen after saying mass on a card table on the front steps, then passing out pro-Viet Cong leaflets inside the church.

In Paris to promote the U.S. exhibit at the air show, the three astronauts, Rear Adm. Alan Shepard, Capt. Edgar Mitchell and Col. Stuart Roosa, presented and commented on a film of their flight to the moon last February.

The U.S. pavilion auditorium, where they made their presentation as the public filed by in the background, was only three-quarters full. When the session was opened to reporters' queries following the film commentary, only one question was asked by members of the international press.

A British newsmen asked America's most recent moonmen if they had any plans to discuss cooperation with the Soviet Union's cosmonauts. Adm. Shepard replied that they were not here to discuss anything of a technical nature with the cosmonauts but that talks were being carried on another level concerning exchange of scientific information with the Russians and the possibility of docking a U.S. craft and a Soviet spaceship in orbit.

A U.S. First
The press had no other questions. "That's the first time this happened," a National Aeronautics and Space Administration press officer said.

Before the question period, Adm. Shepard had volunteered the opinion that the Apollo-14 flight had been important since each scheduled flight to the moon contributed to the total scientific knowledge of space.

The Apollo-15 flight in July will also be important, he added, in that it will undoubtedly produce yet more scientific knowledge. Following next July's flight, there will be only two more Apollo missions to the moon, next year, he said.

The astronauts then toured the circular U.S. pavilion. Wearing metal badges which read in French: "Take the 747; what a pleasure," they stopped for photographs at stands of space-related companies, before visiting the Canadian and British pavilions and lunching at the chalet of LTV Aerospace Corp.

Their tour of the U.S. pavilion was somewhat of a triumph as Parisian policemen struggled to keep autograph-hunters down to a respectable number and aged matrons gushed to be close to them.

"Just to see them; just to be in the same room with them," one elderly lady giggled. "I think they're all handsome," she added, unperturbed by Capt. Mitchell's beard and neat mustache.

U.S. Study Sees Quiet Airports by 1981

WASHINGTON, May 31 (WP)—Quieter airplanes and quiet, un congested airports should be high-priority national goals, according to a federal study group.

Both should be possible in ten years, it said, given a $300-million-a-year research-and-development investment, and $5 billion worth of airport construction.

Federal civilian research in these areas now totals some $150 million. The study of civil aviation research-and-development needs was made by the Department of Transportation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, with help from ten other agencies and a National Academy of Engineering committee.

In Self-Commissioned Study U.S. Food, Drug Agency Called Inadequate

By Victor Cohn
WASHINGTON, May 31 (WP)—Americans cannot be sure of the purity and safety of their contaminant-and-chemical-laden foods and drugs, an expert committee told the government last week.

The Food and Drug Administration, the agency responsible, suffers from "poorly managed laboratories," lack of sound scientific information, "a curious aura of secrecy" and even "an unhurried atmosphere," the group said.

Some FDA laboratories are first-rate, it reported, but some are so poorly managed that their scientists "seem unable to describe their work coherently."

The committee left their labors with a good deal of confusion about what is being done in them," Dr. Roy E. Ritts Jr. of the Mayo Clinic, chairman of the ad hoc science advisory committee, told a news conference.

FDA Landed
Still, his committee concluded—in an examination commissioned by FDA itself 18 months ago—the agency "does an extraordinary job in many ways" in protecting the public.

The largest problems, the group said, are that food and drug technology have outstripped FDA's abilities, and that in a day of thousands of food additives and powerful new drugs, FDA faces "enormous responsibilities" with "limited resources."

As just one area of "possible danger to the public," the committee pointed to the vast use of antibiotics in livestock and poultry feeds, despite "the fact that the public health significance of drug residues in meat and poultry is not well understood."

The committee recommended a long list of administrative and scientific changes, including federal certification of the safety and effectiveness of every batch of prescription drugs.

Watch the Source
The group felt strongly that "overall surveillance at the source" must come "to insure the quality and safety" of all foods and drugs, said one member, Dr. Willard A. Krehl of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Much has been done to implement committee recommendations already, reported FDA Commissioner Dr. Charles C. Edwards, who ordered the study shortly after he took office.

But the reforms cannot be fully accomplished, he said—and certainly all foods and drugs cannot be monitored—without large increases in FDA's $68 million budget, slated to increase by just $2.7 million next year.

Eventually, Dr. Edwards said, the budget may have to be doubled.

The committee urged that FDA act without considering "economic or political factors."

It cited FDA's decision to ban cyclamate sweeteners (because they produced cancer in test animals) as "an illustration of a forced and hurried judgment with inadequate, premature or unconfirmed scientific input admitted with political and industry pressures."

"Shaky" Data Cited
Dr. Ritts explained that he feels cyclamates should be off the market. But the scientific data was "shaky," he said, and the law (which forbids any food-stuffs which cause animal cancers) may be too inflexible.

Among detailed findings, the committee—the first nongovernment group given carte blanche to probe FDA, Dr. Ritts said—found that:

• Too many FDA scientists have been isolated from the world of science in general, and the agency needs a whole new superstructure of scientific advisers.

• FDA's last internal reorganizational, like past ones, left the same middle management, in effect changing little.

• FDA district laboratories now "can do no more than spot-check" drugs entering commerce. A "national center for drug certification" should be established—to start by examining the most critical drugs batch by batch.

• A "national drug experience reporting system" is also needed to monitor drug abuse and adverse reactions.

• FDA's present definitions of food sanitation are too narrow and need to encompass new dangers.

• Expanded consumer and expanded medical education are needed.

Commissioner Edwards has already started reforms, the committee said, but "much remains to be done."

Back to Brandeis?

In a global society that matches massiveness with complexity, there is a growing movement to return to the late Justice Brandeis's theory of the "curse of bigness." Dr. Michael Young in Britain and Robert C. Townsend in the United States have both written with witty force about the inefficiency and corruption of vast enterprises. Ralph Nader and his Raiders are crusading actively against them. Charles de Gaulle sought to temper the effects of bigness in industry by worker participation; President Nixon has urged Congress to curb big government by "creating more centers of meaningful power."

eliminate education as an outwardly-imposed passport to employment—as a commodity which youth is compelled to acquire. But he does not seem to be aware—nor does Paul Goodman, who was his mentor in much, seem willing to acknowledge—that high technological and scientific skills not only permeate the whole of society, capitalist and Communist, but are essential.

The Military Ethic

"It is no secret," President Nixon told the Corps of Cadets at West Point on Saturday, "that the discipline, integrity, patriotism and self-sacrifice, which are the very lifeblood of an armed force, and which the corps represents, can no longer be taken for granted in the Army in which you will serve."

without abridging the basic rights of those who serve and fight. This last problem is complicated when conscripts fight a war they do not understand, when the injection of "the Good Soldier Schweik" into the ranks in sizable numbers makes discipline hard to enforce and morale difficult to sustain. But it has never been easy to form an organization that will obey orders to stand up and die, without knowing the reason for the order, or for the war. The old system, which persists in not a few armies today, was to make the soldiers fear their officers more than the enemy.

International Opinion

The Cairo Accord
The Soviet-Egyptian friendship treaty does not introduce any new element into the Middle Eastern situation. It does not, for instance, commit Cairo to a pro-Soviet stand on all conceivable issues, any more than barter of Egyptian cotton for Soviet arms and military advisers.

Tragedy Into Farce
Mr. Brezhnev knows that the invasion of Czechoslovakia has shattered the Communist movement more deeply than any other event since the Stalinist purges. But has he really convinced himself that those splits will be healed by the sight of the Czechoslovak Communist party thanking him for invading? The opposite is happening. Where the invasion itself was tragedy, the sight of the Czechoslovak party applauding that tragedy becomes farce. It has only reinforced the image of the Soviet Union's total domination of Czechoslovakia. The British Communist party, to its credit, decided to boycott the congress rather than submit to joining in censored proceedings.

Connally and the Dollar
That the Americans should be resentful about the ingratitude or certain of their allies for their largely successful efforts to keep the peace of the world, and to promote its prosperity in the past quarter-century, is understandable.

The Treasury Secretary is on less firm ground, however, in denying so emphatically that the dollar would be devalued, or what amounts to the same, that the price of gold would be increased. He is in danger of having to eat his words one day, as Mr. Wilson had to over sterling devaluation in 1967. There is already a strong feeling among many American businessmen that the dollar is overvalued; and that this accounts, at least in part, for the success of certain foreign imports, such as German and Japanese cars.

PARIS—In regard to the age at which cycling may properly be learned, it may safely be said that the child under 7 years old should not be permitted to ride, under any and all circumstances. When they do begin to learn, great care should be taken as to the size of the saddle and handle-bars. As for elderly people, each case must be taken individually. Sometimes, it is said, cycling may be very beneficial to our senior citizens.

Learning to Think Small

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON—One of the most original thinkers in Britain is a sociologist named Michael Young. His book, "The Rise of the Meritocracy," showed in utopian satire how those who rise to power on merit may be as intolerant and stifling as the old aristocracy.

In a speech the other day Young sounded an important new theme. Or, rather, he transformed an old one by the fresh, almost paradoxical method of his argument. He made the case for smallness in human organization.

Not for People

But, the remedy no longer works, Young said. "It is fine for computers and other machines. They thrive on size. But for a large complex of people the whole has become less than the sum of its parts... There is hardly a large organization in the country which has not gone downhill over the last quarter of a century."

his listeners would, answer no. And he added some telling American examples: the Bell Telephone Company, the U.S. Army, New York City, the University of California.

"Almost all large bodies," he said, "have become afflicted by a new wasting disease, gigantism."

Why does growth bring inefficiency? Young said the answer was simple. The old idea of individual freedom and integrity had grown stronger in our century, he said, and increased civil liberty and social welfare. But that made large organizations hard to manage.

Young's Prescription

All those who have been in large bureaucracies will recognize the disease described by Michael Young. But his cure will still be hard for many to accept: "Seize every opportunity to reduce the scale of organization. Make things smaller, not bigger, in industry and in the public services, and often efficiency as well as humanity will be enhanced."

Hammering Home the Ugly Facts

WASHINGTON—"In these difficult years, America has suffered from a fever of words: from inflated rhetoric that promises more than it can possibly deliver; from angry rhetoric that fans discontent into hatred; from bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading."

Thus spoke Richard Nixon in his Inaugural Address, Jan. 30, 1969. The passage has become something of a favorite of editorial writers, criticizing the excessive rhetoric of the Vice-President, and logically so.

The President's remedy was a suggestion that we all lower our voices. He described it as a simple thing. But it has proved otherwise, and not just for the Vice-President—or for editorialists, whose weakness for polemics is well known, if not traditional. Increasingly, it seems that the raising of voices is an occupational hazard for some newspaper columnists.

Day's Harvest

"Ugly facts" ... "ever-darker plight" ... "deeper and deeper peril" ... "unprecedented losses" ... "vastly more effective" ... "immensely dense" ... "desperately grave" ... "crucially heavy" ... "the fiercest sort" ... "equally critical."

"enormous gamble" ... "real fury" ... "disastrous intervention" ... "extreme resentment" ... "immensely honorable" ... "deeply tragic" ... "very heavy" ... "very high" ... "very active" ... "very timely" and "very deep."

The same day, Evans and (or) Novak were in similar form, thus: "Really dead" ... "immensely successful" ... "hopeless plight" ... "high-volume reaction" ... "highly sensitive" ... "major offensive" ... "dimly perceived" ... "powerful appeal" ... "maximum embarrassment" and "minimum cost."

In the ensuing months, somehow I got sidetracked from this comparative research. To paraphrase President Kennedy, one read as much of Agnew, Alop, Evans and Novak, but perhaps one enjoyed it less.

But yesterday, the research urge came back with a vengeance. "Extraordinary coincidence" ... "total secrecy" ... "cold response" ... "extremely hard-line" ... "traumatic process" ... "diplomatic bullet" ... "sharp anger" ... "unfair pressure" ... "outrageous interference" ... "suspenseful moment,"

Evans and (or) Novak were back—and still—in high gear, and right next to them was Alop in similar form:

"Dreadful years" ... "storm-troopers attack" ... "exceedingly odd" ... "exceedingly left-wing" ... "bitter attack" ... "ugly face" ... "nakedly displayed" ... "woolly-minded" ... "quite irreplaceable."

lies in his teeth" ... "bludgeoning the unconcerned" ... "brutally counter-productive" ... "slaughtering a sacred cow" ...

Is any or all of this by any chance the "inflated rhetoric that promises more than it can possibly deliver" or even the "bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading"? One is forced to conclude that it is.

Letters

India and Pakistan

Millions of refugees—Muslims and others—have flooded India escaping from what France-Sor (14 May) described as "Aboiters' hounding on Pakistan." The Pakistan Ambassador in his letter to you today (May 26) says that it is India's fault. We have many faults but we are not responsible for the ruthless repression in East Pakistan. The Guardian of London stated on the 31st March: "Henceforth the country (Pakistan) must be regarded as a particularly brutal and insensitive military dictatorship..."

What is the genesis of this genocide? Because Mujibur Rahman, with a massive popular mandate (167 out of 169 East Pakistan seats in the 300-member National Assembly, and 286 out of 300 seats in the East Pakistan Assembly) wanted to implement the six-point program of provincial autonomy—known since 1968—on which he fought the recent elections. According to Keating's Contemporary Archives, the majority of the population (54 percent) of Pakistan—about 73 million (of which about 8.5 million are non-Muslims) live in East Pakistan. Mujibur Rahman did

Bernard Levin

From London:

... all the evidence for many years now has suggested that the voters are increasingly skeptical about their political leaders of all political hues.

LONDON—Volatility is the word this week. The British have been doing a good deal of voting, and the political soothsayers, examining the returns with the kind of intensity the Roman augurs used to bring to their study of chicken's entrails, have come up with volatility as the answer—though it has to be pointed out with volatility as the answer whenever they can't actually say just what the entrails portend. Volatile, that's what we are.

First came the municipal elections, the first on a nationwide scale since 1968. Now, 1968 was a year in which the then Labor government was at the very nadir of its fortunes and Labor candidates had been slaughtered wholesale. It was only to be expected, therefore, that Labor voters do what voters do when they recover some of the ground lost in 1968. So indeed Labor did, but the swing went even further, and the Tories lost seats, and municipal councils, that they had held for years without interruption.

The unvarying response of governments in this country (other countries, too, I daresay) to unfavorable results in mid-term elections is to claim that their policies are fine, they are just what the country needs, but they are "bound to be unpopular temporarily"—with the rider that when the country realizes what loving care the government is really taking of the people, the people will swing back in droves to their true political allegiance.

At the same time, the majority party announces that the mid-term results are, on the contrary, a clear indication that the country is sick of the in-party and its leaders, and that the minute the voters get the chance they are going to throw them out, bag and baggage. From the sidelines comes a murmur from the soothsayers: "Volatile."

No Tory Solace

Well, as chance would have it, the municipal elections, with their bitter news for Mr. Heath, were followed by three parliamentary by-elections, held simultaneously. These are generally accounted far better indications of which way the political wind is blowing. But if the Tories thought they would gather comfort from the three parliamentary runoffs, they now think otherwise. Two of them were in safe Labor seats. The interest focused on the third contest, which was a safe Tory seat until last Thursday, but since then it has had a Labor member, as a swing of over 10 percent toppled it. A swing, it is worth pointing out, which would, if repeated nationwide at a general election, sweep Mr. Heath into oblivion and the Labor party back to office with a huge majority.

In recent years this has in fact been the regular pattern. Governments elected even with huge popular majorities have found that the honeymoon seems to last for a shorter and shorter time. After a year, Mr. Heath has been in office for less than a year, and already, it seems, the electorate has turned sour on him and his policies.

Frame of Reference
Rouault's desire for a stable frame of reference also appears in the way his pictorial world is girded with black and in what appears to be his inability to get away from a central and parallel composition.

Alcoa Lifts Pay; Price Will Rise About 6 Percent

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—A three-year contract agreement under which wages will rise by 86 cents an hour was announced today between the United Steelworkers of America and Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa).

At the same time, Alcoa said prices of most of its fabricated products will rise by about 6 percent, effective next September.

When informed that the first-year wage settlement approximated 15 percent, Hendrick E. Houtbacker, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, said that "it is clearly an inflationary settlement. The fact that there were price increases at the same time is sufficient proof of this."

He added that if this settlement is a "precedent" for the steel talks now in progress, "then the steel industry and its employees will be in serious trouble."

Familiar (IOS) Names Start New Operations

By David Egli

GENEVA, May 31 (AP)—In the year since the bubble burst at the Overseas Services, that once most go-go of offshore mutual funds has gone through an unending psychodrama with erstwhile executives leaving at speeds somewhat akin to that of light. A surprising number have chosen to remain in Geneva. The one common denominator for these former employees seemingly is a reluctance to advertise—indeed even mention in public—their ties to the company that Bernard Cornfeld promised would introduce a new era of "people's capitalism."

Sir Eric Wyndham White

James Roosevelt

Such assistance is understandable for a man like Sir Eric Wyndham White, who was director general of GATT, the international trading organization, before he joined IOS. At the height of the crisis last year, Sir Eric succeeded Mr. Cornfeld as IOS chairman and London Sunday newspaper columnist unflinchingly likened his role to that of a "pianist in a orchestra."

Carli Calls for 'Social Discipline' in Italy

ROME, May 31—Italy's economic troubles are here to stay unless Italians place a feeling of "social discipline" above selfish interests, the governor of the Bank of Italy said today. In his annual report, Guido Carli said the changed social and economic climate in which the economy has operated since the nation-wide strikes began in 1969 threatens to replace the former strong growth with a period of stop-go policies and slower growth.

"Social discipline" was declining, he asserted, as groups with sufficient power—meaning organized labor—were trying to win a broader share of the profits of production. The frequent labor conflicts, he said, discouraged new investments. Investment is stagnant, the power of Italian firms to generate investment funds has been greatly reduced, private consumption continues stagnant, the construction industry is in decline, industrial production is lower and foreign trade is in deficit, he said.

Imports Climbed Last year Italy was able to contain inflation to an annual rate of 6.3 percent only through recourse to increased imports which raised the trade deficit to $1.5 billion, he said.

Meanwhile, over the 18 months since January, 1970, Italy borrowed $2.5 billion, principally from the Eurodollar market and West Germany, which enabled Italy to record a $1.9 billion balance-of-payments surplus over this period, instead of the $700 million deficit which would otherwise have occurred, he said.

This has brought Italian reserves to $6.178 billion at the end of April, 1971—made up by 55 percent in gold, special drawing rights and other gold-backed instruments. Restrictions Removed In addition, the bank has removed restrictions on Italian borrowing abroad, provided it is on a long-term basis.

In general, Mr. Carli was pessimistic about the ability of the economy to stand up to current strains. Latest figures for the first nine months of 1970 show an average 23 percent increase in industrial hourly wages—rising to 27 percent in the engineering industry and 33 percent in the chemical industry, he said. Figures for self-generated investment show a decline from 61 percent for large and 59 percent for small industries in the 1969-68 period to 42 percent and 15 percent, respectively, in 1970, he said.

Sharp Fall in Investment As a result, there has been a sharp fall in investment, which is now almost exclusively centered in the oil and chemical industries, the public sector generally and the largest private enterprises, he said.

He forecast a shortfall in total investment from the 14,000 billion lire ($3.24 billion) outlined by the government for the year.

Production, he noted, fell 1 percent over the first quarter of 1971 while the foreign trade balance also deteriorated.

To correct what he called the "wounds presently showing in the economy," Mr. Carli called for a certain interval within which the economy should be allowed to regain its productivity in order to reduce the growing gap between costs in Italy and competitor countries.

Analysts Diagnose Drug Stocks' Ailments

By Vartan G. Vartan NEW YORK, May 31 (NYT)—Drug stocks, among Wall Street's favorite groups in the last decade or so, appear to be catching cold lately. The advice of some analysts: Avoid prolonged exposure in certain cases.

One leading advisory service noted that "the regulatory climate is getting tougher" and went on to say that drug companies were finding it more difficult to develop completely new products. Vulnerability Noted Other analysts, while conceding that many drugmakers will post higher profits this year, point to the vulnerability of certain price-earnings ratios that run 25-40-1 or even higher.

Commercial Solvents, a company better known for bulk pharmaceuticals and animal feed supplements than for dramatic new products, offers a case in point. Last Tuesday an influx of sell orders prevented the stock from opening. On Wednesday it did trade—and thereupon fell 3 7/8 to 38 3/4.

Earlier this month, Commercial Solvents traded above 40, reaching its highest price since 1968. The stock moved up sharply on reports that the company's Italian subsidiary planned to market a new heart drug. Later, in the face of considerable confusion and some skepticism on the effectiveness of the drug, known as Capoborate, the stock came tumbling down.

French Price Index Up

PARIS, May 31 (AP-DJ)—The French retail price index for April rose 0.6 percent to 104.0 from 103.4 in March. The Finance Ministry announced Saturday (1970 equals 100). The index, based on 1970 equaling 100, is up 2.3 percent for the first four months this year.

Asked in an interview whether all this meant, Denmark was moving toward a more selective welfare system, Mr. Baunsgaard replied: "I expect it to go that way, but it will take years."

The 51-year-old premier made these other points: Although Danish public enthusiasm for Common Market membership has waned somewhat, he still expects that a favorable political decision by Britain will lead to Danish entry too.

The tight controls on prices and profits instituted by the government to rein in inflation have no permanent place in a free-market economy, he believes, but some form of government influence on wage-price decisions is essential for the foreseeable future.

Parties in power usually lose ground in times of economic troubles. Thus, he fears the three non-Socialist parties that have

Reserves Climb, Japan Reports

TOKYO, May 31 (AP-DJ)—Japan's foreign currency reserves rose $1.139 billion in May, partly because of speculation over possible revaluation of the yen, to $69.16 billion, the Finance Ministry said today.

The ministry estimated advance payments for exports at $360 million to $400 million and attributed the high figure to speculation over revaluation. Japan's foreign currency reserves have increased $2.517 billion so far this year.

Record Steel Output

CLEVELAND, May 31 (AP-DJ)—Steel output in the United States set a monthly record of 12,965 million net tons in May, prompted by a steel strike threat and price hedging, Industry Week magazine said today. The previous monthly record was 12,721 million tons in March 1968.

Revlon Drops

Revlon, primarily a manufacturer of cosmetics and toiletries, broke to a new low price for the year in the previous week. This was in response to industry reports on an anti-diabetic drug sold by a Revlon subsidiary.

The stock of Abbott Laboratories was an earlier casualty. In March, the Food and Drug Administration ordered Abbott to withdraw its intravenous solutions from hospitals because of bacterial contamination.

The word from Moody's Investors Service boils down to: "Ethical drugs are no longer the high-growth area they once were, and the drug makers are turning increasingly to proprietary and diagnostic items and related medical equipment to maintain their earnings. In this group, we would buy only stocks of those companies that have demonstrated the ability to maintain growth and the foresight to seek out new areas of growth."

J. P. Stevens Losses Mount In Quarter; Sales Off 7.2%

NEW YORK, May 31 (NYT)—J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc., the nation's second largest publicly-owned textile producer, continued to show a deficit in the second fiscal quarter, thereby increasing the loss for the six months ended May 1, according to its report issued Friday.

The net loss for the quarter was $1.48 million, contrasted with net income of $1.56 million, or 26 cents a share, in the quarter to May 2, 1970.

Sales were down 7.2 percent at $217.05 million against $233.84 million. The loss before a tax credit was $3.05 million while pre-tax earnings for the year-earlier period were $3.30 million.

For the six-month period, the net loss came to $3.66 million contrasted with a net profit of $5.87 million, or 81 cents a share, for the half to May 2, 1970. The loss before the tax credit was $5.30 million while a year earlier the pre-tax profit was $10.97 million.

Sales were off almost 10 percent at $399.52 million compared with $443.64 million. About 61 percent of the company's sales in 1970 was for ultimate use in apparel, with 26 percent for household products and 13 percent for industrial uses.

Plagued by Chronic Inflation, Danes Aim to Trim Spending

COPENHAGEN (NYT)—Denmark, chronically plagued by one of the worst inflation records in Europe, is trying to trim some fat off the welfare state to contain government spending.

Premier Hilmar Baunsgaard persuaded parliament recently to abandon the practice of increasing old-age pensions in line with wage awards to the lowest-paid industrial workers. This means pensions will rise this year by only 3 1/2 percent—the national average for wage increases—instead of 12 percent.

The government has also abandoned an earlier consideration of paying a salary to students, and a Finance Ministry planning document has suggested reconsideration of the principle of universal free hospital care in government welfare services.

More Selective System Asked in an interview whether all this meant, Denmark was moving toward a more selective welfare system, Mr. Baunsgaard replied: "I expect it to go that way, but it will take years."

The 51-year-old premier made these other points: Although Danish public enthusiasm for Common Market membership has waned somewhat, he still expects that a favorable political decision by Britain will lead to Danish entry too.

BRIDGE By Alan Truscott
The increasing number of players who have been impressed in recent years by the virtues of a system based on a strong one-club bid will welcome the publication this week of Charles Goren's book "The Precision System of Contract Bridge Bidding." The publisher is Doubleday and the price is $5.95.
In his foreword, Goren points out that he is not abandoning in any sense the standard methods of bidding with which he has long been associated. But he does recommend "Precision," the brainchild of Charles Weil, the Taiwanese shipowner, as a simple and effective approach to bidding.
One of the example hands given in the book, shown in the diagram, is from the 1970 world championship in Stockholm. The Taiwanese players using Precision gained heavily against the Aces by opening the bidding in each room with an 11-point hand.
The East hand would seem to be a sound opening in any method, but the Ace holding it chose to pass. The Taiwanese South opened his 11-point hand and the partnership zoomed into three no-trump.
The opening lead of the club jack was ducked around to the queen, and South had no trouble making 10 tricks. He cashed the heart ace, the spade ace, the two top hearts and the rest of the spades. A diamond lead from dummy at the finish forced East to allow the club king to score the last trick.
In the replay East made the Precision opening of two clubs. South was not quite strong enough to overcall and had a problem when North balanced with two spades. The balancing action might have been made with a much weaker hand, so South passed and thereby missed a game.
To add insult to injury, North found that he could not make even two spades. East led the ace and king of diamonds, a sequence that shows a doubleton, cashed the club ace and gave his partner a club ruff. A diamond ruff and another club ruff set the contract before North even gained the lead, and Taiwan gained 13 international match points on the deal.

THE black man's rhetoric is one of the things that makes it difficult for well-meaning whites to talk to him today. It goes without saying that he has earned the right to this rhetoric; like jazz, it is a natural expression of his feelings. Maybe even more than that, but not everybody understands jazz. Not every white knows that words like "nigger," "fascist" and "enemy"—when applied to him—may simply be blue notes. This is why "A Rap on Race" is so important at this moment. It gives one white a chance to speak for all those who may be baffled, a chance to get inside black rhetoric with James Baldwin, the most published black writer of our time. The choice of a partner for him could not be better. Nobody can accuse Margaret Mead of being either a racist or a "bleeding heart." Because she is an anthropologist, perspective is her profession. And in living on the closest terms among black people in other parts of the world—and writing brilliantly about them—she has surely demonstrated a high degree of empathy.
She and Baldwin talked for seven and one-half hours. They had three sessions, with no moderator, no audience but a tape recorder, to distract them. They came together not to debate, or for one to interview the other, but to "rap"—to talk as freely and as informally as they pleased. The result is the only published "conversation" of its kind. Miss Mead takes her assignment seriously; she is determined to understand Baldwin, even when he doesn't understand himself. Unlike most whites who are concerned about blacks, she does not adopt an apologetic posture. She respects herself as a professional and rarely hesitates to probe Baldwin's sore spots. Every time he tries to pull away, to generalize his complaint, she pins him down to particulars. What exactly do you mean? Again and again, she returns Baldwin's rhetoric to him, translated into plain English: Is this what you're saying? Is this what you actually believe?
Understandably, Baldwin sometimes finds this inhibiting. Baldwin specializes in descriptions—highly emotional descriptions—of what it feels like, to him, to be black in a white world. Miss Mead keeps replying "Yes, but I'm moved by your poetry and I would like to respond to it. Where do you suggest I begin?"
As a social scientist, Miss Mead wants to do something. Baldwin, if one can judge by what he says, does not. Sometimes it almost sounds as if he is afraid of losing his subject matter. We have to "atone" for our history, he says. Atone? Miss Mead answers, why atone? Because we are all guilty, Baldwin says. I am responsible only for what I myself do. Miss Mead says that she thinks whites and blacks have to liberally, to touch each other they once did in the South black women took care of children. Touching will dissolve the sense of strangeness Baldwin agrees, yet it is that he himself is still too to allow it.
From the way he talks would think that Baldwin is fairly new for his life. It stankly uses words like "terrifying, frightening, destroyed. It seems to r them. At times he is operatic, as when he says never, never, never, as I live, be at home anyw the world." This sound nothing so much as a gr promise he is making to himself. Sometimes too he will pile upon clause in what seem merely rhythms, without tive content.
"A Rap on Race" may rich in tangles, but it perspectives. Among other it shows that whites and will never be able to act to—really integrate th races—until we stop segg black writing and black i from analysis and criticism the black experience belong to blacks, the truth bel everybody.

The State of Paranoia

WASHINGTON.—In the city of Meleopolis, on the banks of the Schizophrenic River, live the rulers of the great country of Paranoia.

The rulers of Paranoia are constantly announcing a plot against the government by the citizens. The citizens are always announcing a plot by the government against the people.

Since these plots are passed on by the news media, the rulers suspect there is a plot against them by the news media. This has made the news media suspect that there is a plot against them by the rulers.

The leaders of Paranoia believe that the news media would stop pointing out what is wrong in the country, the problems would go away. The news media thinks unless it points out the faults of the government, things will get worse.

Rostand and Man's Search for His Origins

By John L. Hess

VILLE D'AVRAY, France (NYT)—Like Albert Einstein, whom he resembles, Jean Rostand cannot accept that Man is only the product of a roll of the dice in a universal game of chance.

Jean Rostand...living evolutionary link.

Musing with a visitor in his secluded but famous house where for half a century he has explored the mysteries of heredity in frogs, Rostand took gentle issue with his fellow biologist Jacques Monod.

"It may be the only valid theory," Rostand said, "but I think there must be mechanisms we do not know that explain how these chance variations have ended up by making Man."

In his 77th year, Rostand is a living evolutionary link in man's search for his origins; he connects the naturalists of the 19th century with the microcellular biologists of today such as Monod, whom he said, he found "a little dry, a little too intellectual."

For a moment, he looked guilty, like a benign old clergyman gently deploping a minor lapse. A small, rumpled man in a corduroy jacket flecked with pipe ash, he made a striking contrast with the nearby duty portrait of a bold, almost arrogant boulevardier in smart tweeds; his father, Edmond, author of "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Place of Honor It was the most contemporary of the dozens of paintings that lined the walls of the faded living room.

Like all men of letters around the turn of the century, Edmond Rostand admitted Fabre was a writer. But his son Jean at age 8 was carried away with the enchantment of Fabre's famous experiments with insects. And so a career was born.

Rostand acknowledged that Fabre had tried to disprove Darwin and confirm a grand eternal design in nature. Rostand himself was an early convert to neo-Darwinism and modern genetics. As a young man, he was the first to translate into French the revolutionary work of Thomas Hunt Morgan and other Americans on the chromosome theory of heredity.

"I remember that people at the Sorbonne in those days used to say Morgan lacked the scientific mind that he was a dreamer, that all that was fiction."

Younger researchers carried forward the study of genes and chromosomes into the molecular structure of "the code of life." But Rostand serenely followed in the footsteps of Darwin and Fabre, exploring the mysteries of nature by observation and experiment in a manner that an earlier age would have found comprehensible.

Using specimens from the ponds near his house, almost within sight of the Eiffel Tower, Rostand managed to produce tadpoles that had mothers but no fathers, by treating unfertilized eggs with cold and other stimuli. His doses of books popularizing biology and drawing philosophic conclusions made him famous, and won him the seat in the Academie Francaise previously held by Edouard Herriot.

If his style is closer to that of Fabre, Rostand acknowledged that "philosophically, I am very close to Monod." But as to "the fashionable dilemma" of chance or providence as an explanation for nature—"no," he said.

Rostand said he agreed entirely with "a very pretty page" of Monod that describes man as alone in the universe. Monod went on to say that a man is therefore required to work out an ethic based on scientific objectivity.

"I agree with the ethic of science, the ethic of truth, but that does not seem enough to me either," he said. "I find it a little dry, a little too intellectual. I think there's a little warmth of heart missing there. I don't know whether it's enough to say you're looking for knowledge, you're looking for truth. I find that a little cold."

Here again he appeared to be an evolutionary link between 19th-century humanism and modern trends of social criticism. Like Monod, he broke with Soviet Communism notably over the Lysenko affair, when the Kremlin sought to oppose genetics with theories espousing the disproved inheritance of acquired characteristics.

"Mind now," he said, "there's a lot of good in Marxism. What I cannot accept is Marxist biology. The church, unfortunately, attacked Galileo and Darwin. But there is a Marxist church, too, which attacked genetics. I don't accept it. I don't accept any church and I don't accept the Marxist bible any more than the others."

Rostand deplored what he called apologetically a "slightly lesbian tendency" in the women's liberation movement. "Homosexuals have rights, I agree," he said. "But it's not the same thing. It's a little like drugs. Nowadays they want to mix up everything: pacifism, drugs, sexual perversion..."

The biologist took issue with other new trends. He said he was a pessimist for the long term, because ultimately the race would disappear and anyway, "we are each going to die, which is a nuisance."

But for the short term, he did not agree with those such as Monod who fear an early extinction of life because of the atomic bomb or the population explosion and pollution.

"I think they're exaggerated a little," he said. "But I shouldn't say it, because it's by exaggerating that you get results. They may be right to sound the alarm but I don't think the world will become uninhabitable in 50 years."

"I believe in social progress. I don't know where we're going but I know we're going there. Anyway, we must work for it."

Choices

As he rejects the choice between God and accident, he said, he also rejects the choice between capitalism and Soviet Communism. A rebel in science and politics from his early youth, Rostand admitted apologetically to a nostalgic attachment to a "good old-fashioned socialism."

Here again he appeared to be an evolutionary link between 19th-century humanism and modern trends of social criticism. Like Monod, he broke with Soviet Communism notably over the Lysenko affair, when the Kremlin sought to oppose genetics with theories espousing the disproved inheritance of acquired characteristics.

PEOPLE: Jennifer Jones Wed To Norton Simon

Mr. and Mrs. Norton Simon in London yesterday.

Millionaire Norton Simon sipped champagne in his honeymoon hotel suite in London yesterday and told of his marriage to actress Jennifer Jones in a pre-dawn ceremony Sunday aboard a yacht in the English Channel.

"Jennifer and I only met about four weeks ago," said Simon, 64, who divorced his wife of 37 years, Lucille, last year because of irreconcilable differences. "I fell in love immediately. We decided to come to Europe and it was in Paris that I proposed. We kept it quiet because we didn't want any publicity."

It was their third marriage for Miss Jones, 52. Simon said difficult British residency requirements and the Whitson weekend made a regular wedding on land impossible so they settled for one aboard a chartered yacht outside territorial waters, sailing from Folkestone five miles out into the choppy Channel.

"It was great fun," Simon said. "We were bobbing about in the sea and in the early morning light I could just make out the white cliffs of Dover. It was very romantic."

After the 10-minute ceremony performed by a Unitarian minister, the boat returned to land and the couple drove back to London. "We came straight back and we slept all day," said Simon, who recently sold part of his famed art collection for $6.5 million. "We will probably live in Malibu, Calif."

Miss Jones is the widow of producer David O. Selznick, died in 1965. She was previously married to actor Robert Taylor whom she divorced in 1945.

In another moving marriage aboard one of San Francisco's famous cable cars, Linda Lindstrom and Philby Abbott exchanged vows in a ceremony performed by the groom's father, the Rev. J. Abbott of the United Church of Christ.

And in a wedding yet to be held, Tricia Nixon and Edward J. Cox will be married in a minute ceremony featuring additional prayers from the Rev. Paul J. O'Connell, pastor of the Holy Trinity Church in Los Angeles, Calif.

The bride's father, Fred Nixon, said he hopes Tricia will be "out of the glare of me publicity" after her marriage. "Tricia is independent and we are not for what her father or mother are," said Nixon in an interview in Look magazine.
